The Rocks AVA (American Viticulture Area) is situated on an alluvial fan of the Walla Walla River, where the river exits the foothills of the Blue Mountains and enters the Walla Walla Valley. It lies entirely within Oregon and includes part of the town of Milton-Freewater. Oregon's newest AVA, The Rocks received its designation in 2015. The Rocks is typified by its unusual soil...or lack thereof. The ground consists primarily of dark-colored basalt cobbles, ideal for drainage and encouraging vines to root deeply.
