The Oregon22 Heritage Trail

World Athletics Championships Oregon22

The footfalls of Oregon-grown track and field athletes crisscross the state. For decades the temperate climate, healthy lifestyle values, and the supportive community has nourished the athletic spirit. While many come to compete or train in TrackTown USA — for some global champions, Oregon is, or has, been home. Whether they got their start here, trained here or retired here, these athletes are an intrinsic part of Oregon's proud athletic heritage.

Shalane Flanagan

10K - Silver, Beijing Olympics 2008; Bronze, IAAF WCCC 2011

Plaque Location: George Rogers Park, Lake Oswego

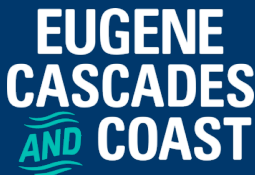

Shalane Flanagan was raised in Massachusetts by cross country champion parents. She ran for the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, winning national titles. After college graduation, she moved to Portland and ran for Nike. In 2008 she won the bronze for the 10K at the Beijing Olympics which was later upgraded to silver after positive tests for banned substances disqualified the runner up. In 2017, she was the first American woman to win the New York City Marathon since 1977. Shalane also collaborated on the Run Fast Eat Slow cookbook series which became a New York Times Best Seller.
